Donors have included foundations run by the Koch family, the Scafes, and the Bradleys. As of 2005, CRC had received $115,000 from ExxonMobil.[9]

Chapos got the Koch foundations making videos demonizing them. We are officially relevant, folks.

Capital Research Center

Capital Research Center (CRC) is an American conservative non-profit organization and watchdog group located in Washington, D.C. It was founded in 1984 by Willa Johnson "to study non-profit organizations, with a special focus on reviving the American traditions of charity, philanthropy, and voluntarism." According to the organization, the group supports "free markets, constitutional government, and individual liberty." It discourages donations by corporations to non-profits supporting what it sees as anti-business or left-wing policies.

That's rightly par, because when they say that they want to shoot everyone who sags their pants or speaks spanish at the cash register, it's not a joke. It just looks like a joke because they're obviously too terrified and cowardly to do it. Instead they leave it to their depressed, suicidal kids.

A joke is when you end a sentence with ", I mean, come on!"

- The clips they use are satire, proving ONCE AGAIN that the right just can't understand humor.
- Dude is a Beta, if there ever was such a thing.
- He cries about CIVILITY!
- Chapo's scorched-earth-strategy is intended to terrorize people into compliance, terrorizes people into silence, to terrorize people from making videos just. Like. This.
- [Gesturing as an urban] This is as radical as you can get before picking up bricks.
